Your Dues are Due Now

by Marie Cullerton

Your Kings Park Civic Association dues for the 2016 calendar year are now payable. Many of you have already paid your dues and also made contributions to the beautification program. For this we thank you. But many more of you have not yet paid. Your dues are what keep our association viable.

|--------------------|---|---|
| President's Letter | 2 | As mentioned in the letter mailed to each of you this year along with a membership form, the money obtained from the dues helps to maintain the unique character of Kings Park. The dues pay for events such as the Potluck Dinner, Octoberfest, Senior Lunch, Fourth of July Parade and Picnic, and the holiday party for the children. These events, plus the printing of the Gazette, paying for insurance, maintaining the entrances and donations to various charities that contribute to the friendliness of the community and the KPCA's commitment to maintain a positive quality of life. The Civic Association is a volunteer organization of neighbors who try, through positive action and hard work to maintain our suburban "sweet spot". |

From the President

From the President:

We have had some unusual weather so far, this year. We did have the dry and mild winter the Farmer's Almanac correctly predicted. Now they forecast a cool and wet summer. We have had some rain problems with the annual KPCA 4th of July parade and picnic for the past several years so our hopes are high for great weather this year.

The KPCA sponsored Community Clean-up day was Saturday May 6th. This, KPCA sponsored event was an opportunity for Kings Park residents to do some Spring cleaning and get many of those unwanted items taken to the County disposal facility for them. The KPCA rented the trucks and provided volunteers to pick-up items.

The Braddock Road Widening Study effort is coming to a conclusion real soon. There has not been much community interest, even after the 3rd Community Meeting held on February 6th at Lake Braddock Secondary School. The County presented the task force study results to date, and the recommendation regarding Braddock Road traffic improvements that will go forward to the Board of Supervisors by Fall.

The last part of the study deals with the separate proposal for a Multi-modal Transit Center. There are five options being considered: no-build, a Transit Center at the Kings Park Shopping Center (two versions), a Transit Center at the old State Training Site on Braddock Road, and a (new option) Park-And-Ride facility at the Kings Park Shopping Center. All these options are on the table and are to be individually rated at the next Task Force meeting early in May. The Task Force decision and recommendation regarding the Transit Center will be presented at the Community Meeting scheduled for mid-June at Lake Braddock Secondary School.

If all of this Braddock Road Widening Study is new to you and you want to know all the details, they are easy to find. The Braddock Road Widening Study is well documented on the Braddock District Supervisor's web site (<http://www.fairfaxcounty.gov/braddock/braddockroad.htm>) to include the materials from the latest Community Meeting and Task Force meetings..

Social media comments and rumors notwithstanding, everything you need to know is available on-line, discussed at our KPCA Website, and discussed at our KPCA Community meetings. The new proposal for a "Park-and-Ride" option at the Kings Park Shopping Center will be discussed at the next KPCA Community Meeting on May 18.

From the President

The front entrances at Kings Park Drive and Southampton Drive, and the nubs on Southampton are now being maintained by our Grounds Maintenance contractor, since becoming a major challenge to our volunteer Beautification Committee. We would welcome some 'younger' volunteers to help us maintain the Kings Park common area and assist in any way they can. Other communities around us make community care a family affair. If there is some interest in this approach I am sure we could make the effort worthwhile and a little festive! Send us an e-mail if you are interested or want more information.

The KPCA's annual Gene Mercer Seniors Luncheon was held on April 27, and again a great success due to the efforts of Marie and her assistants. We thank the owner of Hunan West for continuing to hosting this event for the past 26 years and thank Allen for his continued generosity to the KPCA.

The annual July 4th Parade and Picnic is coming up real soon. Last year we were forced to cancel the Picnic but we hope this year the weather will cooperate. The awarding of commemorative July 4th medals will continue, since this seems to get the greatest response from the younger participants.

The picnic in the park will have the Kings Park Concert Band performing for two hours. This picnic requires a lot of volunteer time to prepare and execute. Each year we are seeing fewer and fewer 'helping hands' yet more attendance from the community. The cost of the hot dogs, drinks and chips is offset by your KPCA dues. Although this is a KPCA event, it is open to all your guests and friends to enjoy.

KPCA dues offset the extra costs involved in offering all these community events -- Clean-Up Day, Entrance Beautification, grounds maintenance, Senior Luncheon, July 4th Picnic, Oktoberfest, Trunk-or-Treat, and the Children's Holiday Party. With the decline in annual membership renewal we have found it necessary to conduct many of these events for 'KPCA members only' and cut back on general expenses. It would be great if more of your neighbors would pay for membership ($25 a year - $20 for seniors) and everyone donate a little of their time to assist in putting these events together.

The Kings Park Shopping Center and the new Giant Food Store are very popular with our residents but many have found that accessibility and parking has become a challenge at times. The future Braddock Road improvements and its impact on commuter parking may not be seen for several years. I would encourage you to attend the KPCA Community Meetings (the next one is May 18th) to see what options are being considered, express your concerns, and hear some suggestions on how to make the situation better.

In closing - I am the member of the Braddock Road Citizens Task Force representing the Kings Park Civic Association. The Task Force Committee is directly involved in the project as it progresses through the concept, issues, comments, proposal and decision processes. I represent the consensus of the Kings Park residents. Without your input and concerns expressed now there will be no recourse once the changes are implemented.

Enjoy your spring – looking forward to summer!

Whimsy Corner

by Terry Boschert

1:00 AM; a home in Kings Park. Lucy the Beagle, member of the Canine Council, padded to her human's computer. One of them was writing still another (sigh) Whimsy Corner article. After his revelation of the Dog, and, yes, to be fair, the Cat, impact on Humans and their civilization, her human was on a council watch list. Fortunately, the few humans who read his articles never take them seriously. In fact, the council considered it unlikely he would ever write anything profound, but members remembered the near catastrophe caused by the "1000 monkeys at 1000 computers" written article about the real nature of UFOs as a warning to always be in a caretaker mode. "So, let's see what he has written thus far", she thought.

Time. Time surrounds us; and because most of us measure time with clocks, watches, and calendars, we see time as a straight-line progression from past to present to future. But is that perception genuine? For that matter, does time even exist?

We believe reality is what we observe with our senses as augmented by our tools, our experiences, and our beliefs. One person's unusual cloud formation is another person's UFO. Not surprisingly, our attempt to understand time must also fit within these constraints. One person's personal calendar entry on a blank space is another person's observation that time cannot exist without space. Because we have such differing views of time, we attempt to define time from several perspectives, all of which overlap in some regard: everyday life, scientific methods and models, religious faith, and philosophical wonderings. Examples of our time views based upon these perspectives include: the common clock; Plank time units; time began with the creation of the universe; wheel of time; arrow of time; repeated cycles of creation, destruction, and rebirth; one where the future can influence the present; and even one example where time does not exist but all possible events do exist; we humans perceive only a few of these events and arrange them as a straight-line flow.

OK, humans can really make a complex mess when we try to understand everyday activities. I am not sure if this is because we think such deep, superior thoughts or that our observational skills are so limited. But what do our animal neighbors on this planet think of time? They have senses, experiences, and memories. Perhaps their views are closer to the capture of time as a reality than ours. So, let's briefly explore an animal's view of time.

The most acute dog sense is the sense of smell. That sense probably biases its view of the world. The freshness or staleness of a scent, therefore, also frames a dog's view of time. If a fresh scent is more likely to be followed to a successful conclusion than a stale scent, then dogs probably see time as a linear flow. If its human puts on certain shoes, then that dog, based upon experience, projects that a walk is in its future.

Now consider the common house fly. Why do you usually miss when you swat at the fly? The fly experiences the flow of time differently than you; from a fly's viewpoint, you move in slow motion and can be evaded. Those flies whose flow of time perception was nearer to yours died out; thus, the perception of time-flow is an evolutionary advantage for flies.

The same time-flow perception is found in many small bodied animals according to a study of 30 different animal species. Study co-author and Trinity College zoologist Andrew Jackson says in a statement. "Our results suggest that time perception offers an unstudied dimension along which animals can specialize. ... We are beginning to understand that there is a whole world of detail out there that only some animals can perceive, and it's fascinating to think of how they might perceive the world differently to us."

1:03 AM, a house in Kings Park. "Well, that didn't take long, as always", Lucy thought, "no fact-based insights here as to what time really is, just simplistic speculation based on woefully inappropriate two-dimensional time models."

"Hmmm, I must snuffle my way to my next mission. I wonder if I should check in with current Lucy and say hi, just to be polite?" she asked herself, "No, this version is getting on in years, I should let her sleep. We can always visit when she envisions as a younger self." And with that, she sniffed out the path that leads to the 11th century on a personal errand to convince William the Conqueror to bring the Talbot Hound, the beagle ancestor, from France to England.

Beyond Earth Day

by Susan Malmberg

The day after Earth Day and the Science March, I finally got around to mowing my lawn for the first time this spring. I noticed that the weeds have really enjoyed this weather and are flourishing. I started thinking about how I could get rid of at least some of the weeds. I am pretty tolerant of other plants in my lawn because I know maintaining a grass monoculture is pretty hard on the environment, but sometimes there are just too many other plants in the lawn. So what are some earth friendly ways to keep the lawn looking acceptable? Many people use glyphosate (Roundup) which the EPA deems safe when used according to instructions. However, California has recently required a cancer warning to be placed on glyphosate, so homeowners might not want to use it so much.

Here are a few earth-friendly ways to deal with weeds:

- Eat them. Assuming other chemicals have not been used, some of the local weeds that can be eaten are Dandelion, purslane, clover and chickweed. I have not tried this.
- Dig them out. If you get the root out this is effective but time consuming.
- Pour boiling water on them. I have tried this and it works, but carrying a teakettle of boiling water out to the weeds is somewhat perilous. It might be best for weeds in sidewalk cracks, as any surrounding plants will also be killed if hit with the boiling water.
- White vinegar. I have used this and it works. Again, it will kill other plants it gets on, so you have to be careful in pouring or spraying it on.
- An internet search will yield a few more earth friendly methods. If you try some of these other ways, let me know how they work!

STORM DRAIN CLEAN-UP

by Beverly Boschert

April 22, 2017 was the 47th celebration of Earth Day. You can make every day Earth Day by remembering to clean the street gutters around your home. If there is a storm drain on your curb, please clean it up all year. Clean up starts at home; the more we can keep out of the storm drains in Kings Park the less we contribute to pollution in Accotink, Potomac, Chesapeake, and all the nearby waterways.
